

surely enhance the financial value of "Craigside," and it will relieve the monotony of eternity for Mr. Davies to be beneath his monument and listen to the thrice told tales of the pensioned guardian, while he sells sandwiches to respectful young men and maidens, and recounts the deathless fame of the one who lies beneath and died for his distressing "convictions."

A careful investigation of these letters reveals the fact that, probably out of letter number three, the deposed Queen received, "in the gloomy recesses of her evil soul," the suggestion for beheading or killing the revolutionists.

In referring to the wickedness of the revolutionists, Mr. Davies says in this letter: "Let me refer to the sentence pronounced against the Israelites who violated the treaty which Joshua had made with the Gibeonites. The Gibeonites had obtained the treaty by fraud, and it became very inconvenient to the chosen people to keep it, but they had to learn at a terrible cost what a sacred thing a treaty is. (This may be profitably studied in 2d Samuel, 21st chapter, 2nd verse.)" On referring to the Biblical text, we find that King David, in order to punish the chosen people for violating their obligations, handed over five Israelites to the Gibeonites for punishment, and they were hanged before the Lord. This letter of July 15, 1893, was undoubtedly read by the deposed Queen and, upon the unerring authority of Mr. Davies' ethics, she resolved to punish her enemies. She took his advice and "profitably studied" his letter. Mr. Davies may claim that he did not request her to behead anyone. Neither did the venerable Quaker request anything when he raised his window and sadly watched a mob who had seized an obnoxious character. "Friends," said he, "there should be, under no circumstances, to put him under the town pump." And it was instantly done. These letters are fertile in suggestions of infamous crimes which justify the severest punishment known to man. Nowhere in these letters is there any allusion to any scriptural event where the wicked are pardoned. Perhaps Mr. Davies knew of none. If the deposed Queen did not read these letters, we have the singular instance of the similarity of thought in the savage and the civilized mind, especially on sanguinary lines.

Further examination of these pamphlets settles forever, we hope, the disputed authorship of the term "damned missionary." Many exhaustive researches have been made in order to ascertain who is entitled to the credit of coining this lurid and sulphurous term. The claims of so many have been vigorously pushed, that modern scholars are reluctant to award it to anyone, without further research. It is said that a gentleman connected with the fore-castle (not the family Castle), of a tramp schooner, gives a circumstantial account of a period when he, under a sudden inspiration, used the phrase in the presence of other seafaring gentlemen, while attending an elaborate dinner of five courses of "lobscouse," on the fore-castle hatch. This, however, is only a yarn which may be safely repeated to the marines of Captains Barker and Nelson's ships. An eminent traveler states that he heard the phrase, for the first time, some years ago while occupying a hack in the streets of this city, when the driver informed him that the country was over-run with "damn missionaries." The driver, however, denied that he used the classic language in the transaction of this business, but did use the term "bloomin' missionary." These letters settle the question, if it can ever be settled. On page 27, Mr. Davies, in referring to the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, declares that "the mind stands bewildered in the presence of such morality and logic, and I may add, such profanity." Here is a distinct charge of "cussing and swearing," that Dr. Beckwith, Dr. Hyde and Mr. S. E. Bishop are "taking the name of God in vain;" are whooping up bad language in the streets, and thereby meriting expulsion from church. And on the next page, in writing of the same Missionary Association, he says: "Those Hawaiians who have sided with the doctrine of the transfer of Hawaiian nationality to any other flag, without consent of the people, are traitors." As profanity and treason justify merit and receive punishment in this world, and especially in the next, it is clear that Mr. Davies has another "conviction" that the missionaries will be damned, and that the term used is only anticipatory. Whether the Almighty will have the temerity to differ with Mr. Davies cannot be ascertained until, in the hereafter, an inspection of the occupants of the hot gridirons is allowed by Mr. Davies. Again, regarding the origin of the term, it is forcibly claimed by Professor Whistler, of Berlin, that the conception of a thought, its mere outline in the mind, without definite and outward shape, entitles the possessor of it, under the best rules of criticism, to the credit of originating it. Mr. Davies, with his really divine knowledge of things, knew long before the seafaring man existed that the missionaries would be "damned," and therefore the term "dam missionary" must have floated in a nebulous state in his mind from the beginning. This forcible argument would seem to be decisive in the case, and should permit Mr. Davies, as the original proprietor of it, to wear it on his hat as a conspicuous trophy, like the wearer of the belt in the prize ring, until some other and more deserving claimant establishes a better title to it.

In closing we can refer only to an incidental matter. It is well known to our Weather Bureau that certain atmospheric phenomena in Nuuanu valley, indicate a Daviesian disturbance, of a cyclonic character. It is believed by some that Mr. Dole's poor health is due to apprehension of danger from this quarter. Just before a tornado of pamphlets from "Craigside," there appears in the sky lurid letters, with the bend of a vast rainbow, stretching across Nuuanu valley, the words "stolen kingdom," accompanied with lightnings and awful thunders. Immediately succeeding this disturbance, the tornado of letters, cutting a narrow swath, sweeps down the valley and strikes the Executive Building. A similar eruption of mud takes place on Hawaii after volcanic disturbance. The children of the valley now speak with bated breath of the "terrible path," and point to its desolate and narrow course, barren, blackened, scorched, and stripped of vegetation. It is even said that several of the valley dogs, while standing outside of the lines of the "terrible path" during a pamphlet tornado, have not been injured, but that their tails, innocently extended within the fatal lines have been severed as if with a razor.

Captain King should construct caves into which the Executive can dive and dwell during the passage of these frightful storm centers. Mr. Dole is in greater danger of being killed by one of these missile-pamphlets striking him with the exploding energy of a "Daviesian conviction," than he is from royalist bullets.

There is much food for reflection in these eccentric pamphlets, but the want of space forbids further consideration of them at present. The spectacle of Captain Vancouver's savage trying to steal a heavy anchor with a maul, and Mr. Davies trying to restore a "stolen kingdom" with a letter, are equally interesting and curious exhibitions of the ways of the "impossible." National Cane Shredder

PATENTED UNDER THE LAWS OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The attention of Planters and Agents is called to the following letter from Mr. JOHN A. SCOTT, Manager of the Hilo Sugar Co., regarding the working of the National Cane Shredder, which he has just introduced into the Mill of that Company:

WAINAKU, HILO, HAWAII,

January 22d, 1894.

HON. WM. G. IRWIN, HONOLULU, H. I.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to yours of the 16th inst. regarding the National Cane Shredder furnished by the Universal Mill Co. of New York, and erected by the Hilo Sugar Co. this past season,

I would beg to say, that it has now been in operation day and night during the past three weeks working on plant cane, and also hard ratoons, and it is giving me the greatest satisfaction. The more I see of its capabilities, the better pleased I am that I put it in, as I am satisfied that it will repay the original outlay in a short time, in saving of labor, higher extraction, etc.

It is shredding from 350 to 400 tons of cane every 22 hours with the greatest ease, and it could shred a much larger quantity if necessary. It delivers the shredded cane in an even uniform feed to the three roller mill, which receives it without the intervention of any labor, and as the cane is thoroughly shredded or disintegrated it relieves the mill of a great deal of strain, thus reducing the liability of broken shafts, gearing, etc.

There is a saving of four (4) men daily on the mill, as only one man is required to regulate the amount of cane delivered by the carrier to the shredder. It has increased the extraction from 4 to 5 per cent.

The economical use of steam is generally a serious consideration in adding new machinery, as in most mills the boiler power is taxed to its highest limit, as it was in this mill, and any increased demand necessitated an additional boiler. But I find that the shredder and the three roller mill engines combined use no more steam than the three roller mill engine did when working on whole cane, while doing better work and more of it, and owing to the uniform feed on the mill, the engine demands very little attention.

The Messrs. from the shredded cane makes superior fuel, and the firemen have less difficulty in maintaining a uniform pressure of steam than formerly.

I will be pleased to have a call from parties interested, as it is necessary to see the machine at work to fully appreciate its capabilities.

I remain, very truly yours,
(Sig.) JOHN A. SCOTT,
Manager Hilo Sugar Co.

Plans for erection of these shredders may be seen at the office of the Agents, where prices and other particulars may also be obtained.
